letter

from the wheelchair to the deal share

A letter to anyone who has big goals but has been stopped by tragedy, loss or circumstances

I get it. I have all the excuses to why I can't. I wasn't born into success. I was given into the foster system from birth. Suffered decades of abuse and brokenness. And have faced death straight in the eyes. I too have a never ending list of limitations to why I shouldn't do or be me. Constantly reminded of my lack. Kids with special needs. The learning difficulties of dyslexia. A nomadic and public lifestyle. Running companies. Or the many challenges from being in a wheelchair to my goal to get on the WBFF Stage. Reality is, I'm just an everyday human like you. I just choose to use my time with no regret.

I have the belief I was born to use my platform to advocate the human voice across the globe. And a willingness to play big and do my 1%Shift. My hope is you do too.

Dear Awesome Human... As a mama of 6 kids and a Gigi to 4. I am constantly reminded of a sense of urgency to make my every breathe count. You and I know neither our day nor hour, yet each of us have the chance to make decisions that will add or take away from the human race. In return we leave behind the future for our generations and the generations to come.

She compresses time and produces results with accuracy and efficiency. - HEATHER M.
